FORTUNE PROMISED.

CREDULOUS AMAH DECEIVED.

PALMIST'S WILES.

An amah employed at No. 2, Torres Building, Kowloon, was the victim of an ingenious confidence trick which cost her $127. According to her report to the police, she met a fortune teller in Nathan Road at noon on October 9. After examining the palms of her hands, he told her that a large fortune was coming her way soon. She gave him five cents, and on his invitation, agreed to call at his house, No. 183, Reclamation Street, Yau Ma Tei, for a further consultation. She went there the same evening. The fortune teller gave her particulars of the fortune. This time she gave him $5. He told her that he would require more money to win the favour of the god of fortune, and made another appointment. This was followed by several others, in the course of which the woman gave the fortune teller various sums of money amounting to $127. A final consultation was arranged for yesterday. When the woman arrived, however, she found the floor empty. The fortune teller had absconded with her money, the savings of a life time.

Another earthquake was registered at the Royal Observatory on Thursday night. It started at 8 hours, 18 minutes and 49 seconds, and continued until 8.25 a.m. The very rapid vibrations denoted that it was focal.

The 17th annual general meeting of Royal Hongkong Yacht Club members will be held at the Club House, North Point, on Friday, October 21, 5.30 p.m. An extraordinary general meeting will follow to consider a proposal to raise the entrance fee to $25.

AVOIDED.
DIPHTHERIA is usually contracted when the child has a cold. The cold prepares the child's system for the reception and development of the diphtheria germs. When there are cases of diphtheria in the neighbourhood children that have colds should be kept at home and off the street until recovered. Give them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and dry will not have to remain at home long. It also clears out the culture that which forms a cold throat when the child is cold and minimizes the risk of contracting diphtheria. Diphtheria

BELIEF IN EVIL MAGIC.

STRANGE CUSTOMS OF TANG-ANYKA TERRITORY.A report on Tanganyika Territory is issued as a White Paper and contains valuable information on the physical features, history, inhabitants, administration and trade of the territory.In a reference to the religions of the people it is stated that Mohammedanism is professed in the coast towns, but has never penetrated far inland. The total number of Mohammedans is 300,000. The German Government feared the spread of Islam, and as a means of combating it recommended the encouragement of pigbreeding among the natives.Two classes of religious ideas, other than Christian and Mohammedan, prevail among the inhabitants of Tanganyika Territory. One is the worship of a sky spirit, called Enzai
(rain) among the Massai, and Asita
(sun) among the tribes allied to the Nandi (Tagoga, etc.). The prayers of the Massai and kindred tribes seem to be genuine native compositions, in which the appeals to the sky god are mixed up with allusions to other heavenly bodies. Among the Massai there appears to be hardly any idea of existence after death, or of ancestor worship. Old men are buried and believed to turn into snakes, but young people die like cattle, and their corpses are simply thrown into the jungle to be eaten by hyenas.Among the Bantu-speaking tribes
a different system of religious ideas prevails, based upon ancestor worship, surviving in a very fragmentary form, but still distinctly traceable. The Bantu name for the deity, Muungu, Migru, Mulungi, etc., seems to mean really ghosts who are deified, or at least who require to be propitiated.
Among these tribes corals are buried and offerings are made on the grave.
The Bantu-speaking tribes are also cursed with a belief in witchcraft, from which the Hamitic tribes are free. This superstition is more terrible than it sounds, for it means that every disaster, such as a death in a family is attributed to evil magic, and when such a disaster occurs it is customary to consult a witch doctor or witch-finder, who indicates some unfortunate person, often a woman, as the culprit, and recommend that he or she be put to death, a recommendation which is usually followed.

FLOGGINGS.

During the German administration
before the war corporal punishment appears to have been regarded as an important method of enforcement of the laws, for in 1911-12, 8,944 official floggings were administered whilst in 1912-13 the number was 8,057. The number of lashes usually bestowed was 25, and when a criminal was sentenced to two floggings—a frequent event—an interval of two weeks had to elapse between the floggings.
No record was kept of the unofficial

SUPER-GIANT PLANE.

PROPELLERS GEARED TO ENGINE-ROOM.A new wonder ship of the air—a giant of giants—heralding a fresh era in design, is taking shape now to the order of the Government in a huge shed at Bristol.Viewed even from a distance the colossus looks astonishingly large. Seen close at hand, with the frame-work of its tiers of wings, as yet uncovered, stretching one above another on either side of its tremendous hull, the machine almost takes one's breath away.Gone is the day of aeroplanes as we have pictured them hitherto. This machine wants a new name. Its body makes one think of the slim lines of a speedy sea vessel. Then, when you are inside it, the impression is rather like that of some Pullman-car express on a glorified scale. But it is not really like a ship or any earth vehicle.
Those working on it merely call it an "aerial transport."It may be used to carry troops. It is big enough to act as a tender for a squadron of aeroplanes, carrying fuel and spare parts for them. It may be fitted up as a Red Cross craft of the air and have its lofty main saloon equipped as an operating theatre.Standing under the shadow of the Leviathan he is creating, Mr. Reid, the Bristol Aeroplane Company's designer, and his band of skilled workers look like maulkins.

ENGINE-ROOM LIKE A SHIP.

There is an engine-room inside the monstrous hull. Banished here at last is that "amateurish" scheme of cutting motors with their propellers out somewhere on wings where they are inaccessible. Here there is a battery of engines with their many gleaming cylinders, grouped in orderly precision;
and—what makes the expert pause—
such a system of gearing and power transmission as has never been fitted to any flying craft before.It is from this engine-room that the power will be transmitted to propellers on the wings; and if the experiment succeeds it will open up a completely new field. There is talk, for instance, already, of obtaining a number of the huge 1,000-h.p. aero engines now reaching perfection and using them for an enormous craft which may surpass our wildest dreams.This Bristol giant will fly by night and day. The peril of a forced landing—that bugbear of the aeronauts—is practically eliminated. If any portion of the powerplant gives trouble there will be mechanics in the engine-room to put it right while the machine is in the air, the other working units being accelerated meanwhile to give the power sufficient to maintain altitude and speed.Nothing could be more reassuring, with the flying world under the shadow of the R. 38 disaster, than to see this latest marvel of British aircraft design.CUTICURA

ADVEESARIA.

We left Wansai pier at about 2.30 p.m. on VOYAGE Monday, which was a Bank Holiday. We were drawing about 3 ft. 6 in. ast, three inches less forward, and corks amid-ship. Wind was from the N.E., and freshening. Large junk unloading large cases obstructing pier steps, we reached our vessel by way of a smaller junk that had been unloading lime. Crew's first watch was spent in removing lime and empty bottles. The skipper, so-called, not because he can skip, but because he was the only man aboard with a yachting cap, was fixing fishing lines, tying on hooks and sinkers, and swearing at the bat.

Oct. 10.—Course N.W. by N. Wind still from the N.E., and freshening. Water coming aboard on the starboard bow. Adversarius caught brawling cargo.

sailor's church at Marseilles. We assumed them to be votive offerings by sailors escaped from great storms. While we were examining these, Adversarius, saying something about having marooned a monkey here on a previous voyage a twelve month ago, dashed off into the jungle. We looked at each other, for we could all hear something that sounded like the cry of a monkey. Presently yell informed us that he had found what he sought. We hastened up a mountain path in the direction of the noise.

In a grove above the RECENTED level of the temple roof we found Adversarius at the foot of a tree, calling Eve. Eve! Glaring down at him, and making fierce grimaces, was a large female monkey. "It is Eve" said the old man, although it was then only three o'clock in mid afternoon. So it appeared that Eve was his name for the monkey, which showed no signs of recognition. Every time he approached her she showed formidable teeth. As he refused to come away, we left him wailing, and continued the exploration of the island. On the northward shore we found two fine caves, above ordinary high water, but evidently due to erosion by the sea. They were big enough to stand erect in, and one of them penetrated the mountain to a depth of about eighteen feet. Making careful note of their location, in case they should be required later for smuggling or piracy, we climbed a spur that brought us to an eastward outlook, with gigantic monoliths standing sentinel over the secrets of the island. Here, under huge boulders, were dry quarters for a large crew, in case of shipwreck, but unfortunately we could find no trace of fresh water, although the foliage was lush and semi-tropical.

A call from one of A GRUESOME two of the party, peering DISCOVERY into a niche between two boulders, brought us all to his heels. "There is something queer here," he said. All we could see at first was an old sack, but at the top of it protruded what looked like human hair. One pulled aside the top of the bag, and a death's head leaned forward and grinned at us. Ugh! Most fled, but two of us remained long enough to note that the body had apparently been sewn up in a previous bag of a different material, that had rotted away. The hair had stuck to it, the scalp coming clearly off the skull, which was newly white. Someone had thrown the sack over since. Asking each other what it meant, a murder, or a case of "dumping," we found our way back to the grove, where it appeared the monkey had done her utmost to devour Adversarius. General sympathy was felt for her disappointment. A camp fire was made on the beach on a place as remote from the mysterious corpse as we could find, and a meal prepared and eaten, while some fished from the rocks. With the exception of two or three small snapper, most of the fish caught were those absurd and useless (some say poisonous) kind that pull themselves up like the John Dory. Towards sundown, the melancholy howling of the monkey in the jungle, and the thought of that sitting skeleton on the other slope, made some of the party begin looking round over their shoulders, nervously. There was a general desire to get back to the ship, and we got.

Shore party returned LOG about 5.30. None RESCUED, missing, but some looking sick. Rumours soon spread throughout ship, and things were said about bad joss. Motley feared, but all worked willingly to get away from the island. Anchor weighed before 6. Nearly four catties. Course E. by S. with wind east, and freshening breeze. In 22 deg. N. lat. and 113 E. long. spoke a two-master but got no answer. She was heading South, full and by. Made landfall before dark. Skipper jammed finger nail in one of the cabin ports, and knocked his head on the skylight. Bad joke beginning to work. Who then next? May God preserve. Oct. 10.—Fetched pier and disembarked passengers all safe but thirsty. End of log.

Walking, of course, is somewhat slow, and I am not sure when that "argument," which I first met in the early nineties, originated; it is associated in my mind with the name of Crookes. It is silly as the smokeroom conundrum that asks what would happen if an irresistible force hit an immovable body. The admission of either excludes the possibility of the other. In the case of this fourth dimensional "bosh," the stupidity is in pretending the possibility of a "two-dimensional" world of mind. No sane intellect, however willing to assume something to help on an argument, can consent to assume such an unthinkable hypothesis as "a being moving in a two-dimensional world." For mathematical purposes, we sometimes condescend to speak of a plane as bidimensional, but the word "balances" itself which persuades itself that it can entertain any conception which does not include of necessity the three dimensions. This child's play and word juggling has done a lot of mischief. It is now fairly well known, and many simple people believe that in some mathematical way the possibility of a fourth dimension has been demonstrated.

It would not approach THE adequacy as a statement of fact to say that the LITTLE Egoist is self-satisfied. The untaught nature of his own excellence evidently catering for securing his life's faith that it is in the highest degree probable that the merest rumour that he is not damagedly perfect would reach him with a sense of shock. It would be news to him. Consequently, it is quite easy to savour the basis of the manner with which he delivers his obiter dicta. Assume that he condescends to be informative to the extent that "it looks like rain." He is conscious of no need to indicate that he ever read any instructive work on weather signs, as a result of which he interprets certain phenomena equally visible to you along lines you yourself might do were aware of them. Nothing of that sort. He presents to you an independent and original discovery of his own, which requires no authority or confirmation beyond the honour of his own promulgation. It must be true, because he himself has said it, and it is necessarily important, or he would not have wasted his time and his talent on giving it utterance. He has convinced his wife of his omniscience that she has become an admiring if unconvincing echo. When he pontificates to you in her presence, say that two and two make four, another original discovery of his own, she will squawk a sort of confirmatory repetition. "Yes. He was saying to me only the day before yesterday that every four must include two twos. weren't you, dear?" He waves to her fondly, and she subsides, humbly and gratefully. She has been permitted to be of service, to pick up the handkerchief of the All Highest. It is enough. The little blighter must have a rhinoceros hide, otherwise it is hard to guess how he has managed to survive after going amongst common men. It would seem inevitable that some group should use him as a football, to mark its genuine horror of such super-cumpleness. How to refrain from gross violence when he observes (to a congregation of normal adults) that it seems to him the Irish Problem is a very intricate one, with more than one side to it. That time his wife's presence saved him, though she was not entirely out of danger herself when she said: "Very intricate. That's what he said it was at breakfast yesterday morning—a very intricate problem." Someone does not realize that such a person eats breakfast, anyway. One rather thinks of him as being inflated, blown up.

ONE LECTURER hurt people that I like, people who are good to me. They express surprise that I should have "gone for" a lecturer who shares some of my own beliefs. He was (they tell me) sound on the L.O.N., and I can see for myself that in his last lecture he sees life as I see it. Earth's crammed with heaven, and every bush afire with God: But only those who see take off their shoes; The rest sit round and gather black berries.

Even so, I twigged what some in the audience complained of, namely, "a certain elusiveness," and good causes have little use for elusive champions. What cannot be said simply and plainly is not worth saying. The lecturer was entangled in supernaturalism, just as a good man may have smallpox. I cannot work with either, till he is purified. Worse still. Dr. Hodgkin was (according to the newspaper reports, of which he made no complaint) entangled in nonsense. I will not hear without protest such reason-befogging nonsense as this, which I clip from the Daily Press report:

"Just as a being in our three-dimensional world may be in certain circumstances, unseen and unknowable, to a being moving in a two-dimensional world, so we may be unconscious of the existence of a world outside our own."

I am not sure when that "argument," which I first met in the early nineties, originated; it is associated in my mind with the name of Crookes. It is silly as the smokeroom conundrum that asks what would happen if an irresistible force hit an immovable body. The admission of either excludes the possibility of the other. In the case of this fourth dimensional "bosh," the stupidity is in pretending the possibility of a "two-dimensional" world of mind. No sane intellect, however willing to assume something to help on an argument, can consent to assume such an unthinkable hypothesis as "a being moving in a two-dimensional world." It would not approach THE adequacy as a statement of fact to say that the LITTLE Egoist is self-satisfied. The untaught nature of his own excellence evidently catering for securing his life's faith that it is in the highest degree probable that the

It is not necessary to HEAVEN. bolster up belief in Heaven by such mental legerdemain. If "The kingdom of heaven is within you"—a text which the Fathers rather seem to neglect—it is not necessary to prove that we may be "infinitely near" what is within us. All this talk of "a world beyond" is unnecessary, for there can be no world beyond God, and we teach the kiddies that God is everywhere. Where He is, there must Heaven be and if He is everywhere, then everywhere is heaven. That is logic nearly (but not quite) as bad as the Fourth Dimension trickery. It is only possible by the use of terminology based on the primitive imagery which presented Heaven geographically, as a place instead of as a state of mind, in which the divine spirit is. My mind is heaven at this moment. How comes it, then, that I am not treating this lecturer more lovingly? Because my mind is quite definitely finite, and has no room for more than one thing at a time. It knows that the lecturer is relatively unimportant, and that the truth has the first claim. It loves all those whom such verbal jugglery would delude and bewilder, and desires first to clear their minds.

ANOTHER argument about ILLUSTRATION that Jesus made a ghastly mistake? That is not fair. People who think that I do never allege that. When we point out that the result of that life has not been a new social order, we mean that his followers, his interpreters, his exponents, his teachers and preachers, have made the ghastly mistake. The Hon. Bertrand Russell, who is a lucid shinken, has expressed it for us in this way:

"The principles of the Sermon on the Mount are admirable, but their effect upon average human nature was very different from what was intended. Those who followed Christ did not learn to love their enemies or to turn the other cheek. They learned instead to use the Inquisition and the stake, to subject the human intellect to the yoke of an ignorant and intolerant priesthood, to degrade art and extinguish science for a thousand years."

I stop there. There follows a sentence which surprises me, as coming from a man usually able to say what he means. He goes on: "These were the inevitable results, not of the teaching, but of fanatical belief in the teaching." I cannot pass that. Given a teaching that is true, fanatical belief in it is so much to the good. I believe in fanatics, sooner than in Lao-tzeans. The bad results noted were due to the misinterpretation of the teaching by people who fanatically followed their own errors and garblings, and interpolations and impositions and misunderstandings. First let us be clear, avoid misunderstandings, (such as this lecturer was helping to perpetrate) and then be as fanatical as possible—the more so the better. But we must first be clear. Hence my regular line of procedure, attacking cant and mumbujumbo and deluding phraseology and ignorance.

Tuesday evening the traffic policeman stood TRAFFIC on his little wooden PROBLEM pedestal at the foot of Garden Road. Heywood. Then, simultaneously, he saw a motor cyclist approaching and an old Chinese woman beginning to cross the road. He motioned to her to hurry up. The dear old thing tottered toward him and seemed to be asking him just what it was that he wanted. The cyclist, apparently an Army officer, swerved by, and turned his head as he went to gaze at the old lady. The policeman glared at her also, to show that he disapproved where the Sabi did. The old lady, puzzled by her unpopularity, tiddled on. No one noticed that that indignant officer, muttering things about the stupid Chinese, etc., attacked that hill at a fast, unskillful, and unsafe speed. He covered the space across the angle, roughly twice the width of the road, say nine to ten yards, in one second. Sixty by sixty is 3600, which gives on the lower computation of nine yards, 41,400 yards; or even 23 miles an hour. And he looked so angrily at the old Chinese lady.

Nature gives to the blind SCIENCE acuter hearing. One of my readers, and occasional contributors, suggests to me certain phenomena as indicating how nature compensates the deaf with a keener sense of smell, but I do not know, in the case of the case of the blind, that such persons do have a keener sense of smell. Even if they have, I cannot see where ideas of compensation come in; in Hongkong, where the nose knows so much that it would rather not. "No, Harold, your postulate cannot be entertained."

Since the mountain did not go to Mahomet, and the Mahomet came to it, MOUNTAIN. Your lecturer visited Ma, having heard of my efforts to reform you, and he wished me more power and success. A likeable man, one that would say more than he does, but is a little afraid of being discourteous to the Devil. A lecturer, not one of the prophets. His books should be better than his lectures, for reasons I need not now give. He says our Bishop is a good man. I've heard others say so. I said that all I had against him was his bishopric. It is my theory that a good Bishop cannot be a good Christian nor a good Christian a good bishop.

If the people who write letters referring to our University students as "unruly" boys are not on the University staff, they must be ignorant outsiders, and should not be. If they are, their attitude is entirely wrong. These young men should be treated as men, because they are behaving like men, quarrelling over a puntinio.

The woman who can as a mercenary adulteress repeatedly deceive her husband, and yet be genuinely shocked by the repetition of a working class expletive, would make a suitable character study for the modern novel.

A desirable preliminary step to the improvement of international relations and ultimate world peace would be for all the newspapers to tabu foreign policy as a topic.

Hongkong is mentioned in the Bible, as beautiful outwardly, but full of dead men's bones. (Matt. XXIII. 27).

"Delta" requests the China Mail to mention that the Central Executive Council of Trade Unions of the Far Eastern Republic has resolved to discharge the Trade Union Famine Relief Committee for negligence in its duties. This should gratify the reverend gentleman who wants the papers to devote more attention to optimistic news.

The man whose enemy is dead can look without aversion at corpses, which help him to realize how very dead his enemy must be.

The man who has not thoughtfully read the preface to Shaw's play "Misalliance," a treatise on parents and children, has not completed his education.

Said a lady friend to me, "I hear the Morning Post definitely declines to publish any more things that Matter." Said I to her, "But it never did publish things that matter."

I am told that the "AUX ARMES" conspiring together to CONTOYERS" punish all those ten-ants who take advantage of the protection at present given them by the Law of this Colony. I am told that they have a "black list" which is being circulated amongst them. If four men of spirit will testify that they have received the warning I hear about (when this Law is repealed, cut you go, and you will not get another house) the Government can and will act. I call for four volunteers, and I give them my personal assurance that I honestly believe they will not be allowed to suffer anything because of it.

In the meantime, letters being sent out by the head of the Spanish Dominican Procurator, though they contain no words that can be regarded as threatening, have a suggestive look I don't like. This man Noval says he learns on returning from a holiday that the Tenant has refused to pay an increased rent as from July 1st, notified on May 26, and considering that these rents have not been increased for years, hopes or trusts that the Tenant will pay!

I am told that it is not true that these rents have not been raised for a long time.

In my opinion a foreign concern like the Spanish Dominican Procurator should not be allowed to own property here anyway; but while it does, should be made to respect our Law. While it is not unlawful to accept a rent higher than stipulated by the Law, when such is voluntarily offered, it does not look like respecting the law to request a tenant to disregard the law.

It is a pity that the Law did not forbid voluntary tenants of the worm-like nature defeating its objects.

Intimidations, or even requests like this Spanish one, were certainly not contemplated.

If the tenants would combine and stand loyally by each other, intimidation would be less easy, but unfortunately new people keep coming in, and overhanded local people who have been on the waiting list a long time. The Law does not prevent an estate company from giving preference over a man who has had his application in six months, offering the standard rent, to a new arrival who offers more. This is a pity.

Meanwhile, I take it that the Government will, on hearing of these reports of intimidation, thwart them in any case by renewing the Law when it expires. But if four respectable men, acting independently, testify to natural power, not written, much more drastic things could and would happen.

I have a good landlord myself, who has been satisfied with the same rent for years, so I cannot abase the house owners as a class. But if I had my way with the naughty ones, there'd be more sports in the harbour now that the water is cold enough.

OLDEST TENNIS COURT.

WHERE HENRY VIII. LOOKED

"A PRETTY SIGHT."

Tennis will be resumed on the famous court at Hampton

Court. Built and played upon by Henry VIII., this court, which has just been repaired, has served as a model for all others in the world.

For the last 50 years the court has been used by the Royal Tennis

Court. It was on this court that

Bluff King Hal was seen

playing by the Venetian Ambassador

Guidiunni, who wrote home saying that the King "is extremely fond of tennis, at which game it is the prettiest

sight in the world to see him play,

his fair skin showing through a shirt

of the finest texture."

After his game the King always donned a splendid coat of blue velvet.

Mr. Ernest Law, the historian of Hampton Court, told a reporter that he well remembers King Edward VII.

playing on the court when he was

Prince of Wales.

Mr. Alfred White, professional of the Royal Tennis Court, said that tennis is rapidly returning to favour.

"England has by far the most courts

he said. "There are about 30 in the country altogether, but they are not all in use."

Tennis is England's oldest game.

It is played in an enclosed court with a penthouse—a roof sloping from the wall on three sides. The ball may be served on to the penthouse and is similar to that used in "fives."

Two Henry VIII. tennis balls were found last year among the rafters of Westminster Hall.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

My dear Children,

Some weeks ago I told you a story about the dogs Snip and Snop in which a kitten called Snorum had come to live with them. I thought that you might like to hear some more about her so here is a tale of how she was lost. It ends up all right though fortunately!

Your loving.

PETER PAN.

SNORUM IS LOST.

You remember that a kitten called Snorum had come to live with the dogs Snip and Snop.

They all soon became great friends and had many games together. Snorum did not go for walks with Mary, as Snip and Snop did, but at any other time the three were always together, playing in the house or garden.

One morning Mary took the dogs out for a long walk. They called out good-bye to Snorum who sat by the front door in the sun washing her face with her paws and she answered, "Me-ow, me-ow," which they knew meant, "Don't be too long or I shall eat up your dinners."

They knew though that this was only a joke, as she was not a greedy cat, so they only laughed and hurried on. They were away a long time and Mary had to go some distance to see a friend. On the way back Snip said to Snop, "I am so hungry. Let us hurry up and run on ahead of Mary."

"Very well," agreed Snop, "I am famished too."

So on they ran as fast as they could go. When they reached the house they called out, "Are you there Snorum? Have you eaten all our dinner? but there was no reply.

"Where are you Snorum?" they cried, going from one room to another, and still there was no answer. In the dining room on the floor by the window Snorum's dinner had been put down on her plate, but it had not been tasted.

"Where ever can she be?" Snop asked Snip and they were both as puzzled as they could be, for Snorum was always at home at dinner-time.

Just then Mary came in and when she found that her cat was not in the house she called to her in the garden and in the field beyond.

"Never mind," she said at last. "I expect she will come back soon. We will have our dinner."

How ever when dinner was finished she had not appeared, so Mary and the dogs set out to look for her. They hunted all over the place and were really getting anxious. Snorum was a pretty little kitten and Mary was afraid that someone might have stolen her.

Mary's mother, who had been helping in the search at last said, "If Snorum has not turned up by tomorrow we will put a notice in the shop windows and an advertisement in the papers and then perhaps somebody will see it and bring her back."

"I hope they will," said Mary, who was feeling very sad.

Snip, who had heard this, said to Snop, "That is a good plan if she does not turn up. But I know one place where we have not looked yet."

"Where is that?" questioned Snop.

"The wood beyond Ivy Farm," Snip told him, "Snorum said one day that she was going to explore it when she had time."

"So she did," said Snop, "Come along. We will have a look there." Off they scampered and soon reached the wood which was not very far away.

"It is rather dark in there," remarked Snop, peeping between the trees.

"Oh we can find our way I am sure," said Snop.

There was so much undergrowth in the wood that it was not altogether easy to push their way in and they were almost giving it up when suddenly Snip cried, "Listen, what is that?"

A faint "Me-ow" was heard and it sounded rather pitiful.

Both the dogs at once fought their way through until they came to an open space in the wood. And there was Snorum, crying dreadfully, with her long fury tail caught in a rabbit snare.

"Oh poor Snorum," they exclaimed together and Snip at once said, "I will run home and tell Mary where you are and Snop, you had better stay here to cheer up Snorum while I am away."

"Does it hurt you Snorum?" asked Snop sympathetically as his brother had hurried off.

"Yes it does pinch me badly," she replied, "But now that you have found me I do not mind so much. I was afraid that I should be here all night and though I called out as loudly as I could no one heard me for such a long time."

"It was a good thing that you told me that you were going to explore this wood," said Snop. "Or we might never have found you."

In the meantime Snip had reached home and had found Mary still bunting for Snorum in the garden.

"Woof-woof," he barked (which meant "I've found her") and catching hold of her skirt he tried to pull her along towards the wood.

"Let go of my skirt Snip," said Mary, "You'll tear it and then Moher will be cross with me." "But, as he still hung on, it struck her that he was doing it for some purpose and she let him pull her along towards the wood.

"Here we come," barked Snip, and Snop at once called out as that Mary knew where they were.

"My poor dear little pussy!" she exclaimed when she saw Snorum. "How did you get caught like this?"

Then she opened the trap and Snorum was free but—alas—a little bit of her tail was left behind in the trap. It was lucky for her that she had such a long one or people might have thought after that that she was a Manx cat.

Mary carried her back, gave her some milk and bandaged up her tail. Snip and Snop were given big lumps of sugar each because they had been so clever in finding their friend.

Snorum's tail was soon better and she did not go exploring in the wood any more!

When is a sailor not a sailor?
When he's a-board!

CHURCH NOTES

XXIST SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

The Epistle for the day consists of those grand words at the conclusion of St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, written during his imprisonment at Rome. It deals with the "whole armour of God" with which we are to fight against evil, and especially against "spiritual wickedness in high places," implying that often those who hold high positions in Church or State are so evil that they must be fought against.

The idea of the "whole armour of God" was probably suggested to St. Paul by the sight of the Roman soldier who acted as guard to the imprisoned apostle, for he saw in the soldier's "armour" similes of our spiritual weapons—the girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, the sandals of peace, the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit. It is rather remarkable that there is a somewhat similar description of the "armour of God" in the fifth chapter of Wisdom, where it is described as the clothing of God Himself: St. Paul may have been familiar with this.

The whole passage is a striking specimen of the union of meditative and half poetic beauty with impassioned earnestness, which is so characteristic in this letter of St. Paul.

The Gospel gives us the account of the faith and conversion of the nobleman or king's officer whose son was healed at a distance by the word of Christ.

The story is especially interesting as it traces for us the stages of faith marked in Christian theology: Credo in Christum, Credo Christo, Credo in Christum. The last, which is the full acceptance of the salvation of God in Christ, is the "justifying faith" of St. Paul's teaching later.

Next Tuesday is St. Luke's Day, and the few days round about the time of this festival is called St. Luke's Summer because in England we usually have a short spell of warm summer-like weather at that time.

S. Luke was a man of considerable culture who was a native of Antioch in Syria. He is believed to have been a slave household doctor (possibly to a master called Theophilus, c. A. D. 10) at one time, but was afterwards liberated. He became a convert to Christianity and was later the friend and companion of St. Paul in his Missionary Journeys, being his faithful companion up to the time of St. Paul's death at Rome.

Although a slave, he was both clever and learned, and his style of writing Greek (as shown in St. Luke's Gospel and The Acts of the Apostles) is excellent. Tradition makes him an artist of talent and there are some paintings still existing which are believed to be his work. His end is not exactly known, some say he died a natural death, but many believe that the wonderful saint, hoary with age (St. Jerome says he was over eighty), suffered martyrdom while preaching the Gospel in Greece. The story says that the heathen in rage took him to kill him, but in their thirst for his blood they could not wait for the cross, so they hanged him on an olive tree.

His body was interred at Constantinople and probably there remains to the present day, a memorial to the saint. Monday is especially remembered by East Anglian Churchmen as being the day of the translation of the bones of St. Ethredreda.

She was the daughter of Anna, King of East Anglia, and was married against her will, to Tumbert, an Anglo-Saxon prince, who gave her the Isle of Ely as a dowry. She established a religious house there and became its first abess. After her death in A. D. 679 her body was ultimately buried in the present cathedral church of Ely, and she has since been regarded as the patron-saint of Ely Diocese—the present diocesan banner has upon it a beautiful representation of St. Ethredreda.

A meeting of the Committee of the Victoria Diocesan Association was held at the Cathedral Hall on October 7th, and important discussions took place relative to future work and expansion.

A financial statement was read which showed the finances to be in a healthy condition. Grants were voted from the Association for various branches of activity in the Diocese.

Such a society as the V.D.A., consisting as it does of zealous church people, ought to do much for the furtherance of Christ's work in South China: the present enthusiasm of its members augurs well for the future.

The lectures delivered by Dr. Hodgkin have evoked considerable interest amongst churchgoers in Hongkong, and it is hoped that his messages may not be soon forgotten. His lectures had not so much the religious as the social touch, although it is of course difficult to distinguish between the two.

Living in Hongkong, as we do, far from the melting pot of European social questions, one is apt to forget the struggle that is going on and believe that all is well. The lecturer had nothing new to tell us—he merely brought to our memories again the fact that all is not well, that the world is gripped by the birth pangs of a new age, and that new age is to be a great one we need to revolutionise our individual as well as our class social relations.

A remarkable discovery has been made at the Church of Lower Halstow, Sittingbourne, where an uninteresting looking font has been found to have as its foundation a fine old lead font probably of continental origin. The inscrutable cement font, previously known in the church, was cracked by heavy gun practice and air-raids, and when the lump of cement were removed the ancient work was revealed.

It is a richly decorated lead font of cylindrical form, its sides being embossed with an arcade of semi-circular Norman arches, each enclosing a figure in relief, representing kings and angels repeated in pairs.

WASHINGTON CONFERENCE.

LLOYD GEORGE'S ATTENDANCE ALMOST CERTAIN.

LONDON, October 14.

It is understood that though a definite decision has not yet been reached, Mr. Lloyd George is likely to leave for Washington about November 5.

AMERICANS GRATIFIED.

WASHINGTON, October 14.

President Harding, Mr. Hughes, Secretary of State, and all the officials connected with the forthcoming conference are very gratified at the report that Mr. Lloyd George may come to Washington after all. It is felt that his attendance will materially assist in furthering the success of the deliberations.

DISARMAMENT PROSPECTS.

NEW YORK, October 14.

Commenting on President Harding's letter with regard to disarmament, the New York Times says that President Hardin's reminders of the difficulties in the way of the conference are timely and sound. Arming is caused by national policies, and until they are modified or brought under comprehensive agreement there can be no general cutting down of military burdens. The New York Herald says that America will do all that is possible to achieve the lessening of armaments but undoubtedly will be entirely governed by what the other nations do. The paper urges all nations to lay their cards on the table because thus only can the conference arrange practical limitation of armaments.

UPPER SILESIAN DECISION.

PROPOSALS FOR MEETING ECONOMIC DIFFICULTIES.

LONDON, October 14.

Regarding the Upper Silesian settlement, Reuter learns authoritatively that the Council of the League recommends that its proposals for meeting economic difficulties which would arise from the proposed partition shall form the basis of a convention which it suggests should be concluded between Germany and Poland. The Council also proposes that the execution of these decisions should be supervised by a mixed commission with an equal number of Poles and Germans from Upper Silesia under a disinterested chairman nominated by the League.

BRITAIN ACCEPTS.

PARIS, October 15.

Britain has notified France of her acceptance of the League's recommendations for settlement of the Upper Silesian question without reservations. It is anticipated that the inter-allied commission at Oppeln will begin to apply the League's decisions in the course of the ensuing week.

COAL CRISIS SETTLED.

MAY COLLIES EXPECTED TO RESTART.

LONDON, October 14.

The coal crisis in South Wales over subsidy dispute has been settled in favour of the owners by the award of the arbitrator, Sir William Plender. The mines department contended that the liability of the owners for the September wages was 97.57 on the 1915 standard rates. The owners claimed this should be 76.6. The award is expected to result in the restarting of numerous collieries and the easing of the unemployment situation.

T.K.K. DIVIDEND.

DRAWING ON RESERVE FUND.

At the general meeting of shareholders of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha held at Tokyo recently a dividend of 8 per cent. was declared. Reporting on the conditions of business during the past six months and alluding to the depression of shipping situation, Mr. Asano, President of the Company, in the chair, said: "It is regrettable that owing to the continued depression of the shipping situation the result of our business during the last term was not so successful as usual so that we were obliged to defray from the reserve fund about Y.700,000 to bring the rate of dividend to 8 per cent."

Although objections were raised against the declared amount of dividend by some of the shareholders who recalled the promise made by the President to pay a 10 per cent. dividend in this term, the proposed rate of dividend was accepted.

The proposal to issue debentures totaling Y.3,000,000 to be used for the payment for newly-built ships was submitted for consideration and discussion by the meeting. The debentures are to be issued with the new steamers, "Fukuyo Maru" and "Ginyo Maru" as securities through the goodwill of the Yasuda Bank and are to be sunk within three years.

EXCHANGE DECLINE EFFECT.

LOCAL MOTORISTS.

HAVE THEIR TROUBLES AND MEET TO DISCUSS.

The Hongkong Automobile Assoc. has issued a circular calling a meeting for the 25th, and outlining tentatively what the committee thinks the meeting should do. A letter to the China Mail from the Secretary says that "it will be left to the members to decide" and that the committee will accept suggestions and criticisms. Cela va sans dire. The committee must do what the members (by majority vote) tell it to do, or resign.

Incidentally, this Association should consider the point if it is expedient to have on its committee members who are professionally interested in the automobile trade.

The present bobbery is mostly about chauffeurs' wages. Those Shanghai chauffeurs are said to be too sassy and independent and expensive.

The present suggestion is to classify chauffeurs, into first, second, and thirds, and pay them uniformly as follows:

First	$55 to $60 per month.
Second	$45 .. $50 ..
Third	$30 .. $40 ..
Messrs. J. McCubbin, C. Lauritsen, F. Bevington, C. D. Lambert, and A. Henderson are suggested as a sub-committee to do the classifying.

The Association's lawyers have drafted a "model" agreement to use when hiring a chauffeur. We would like to tell them that in our opinion the last clause violates the whole. It says:

"If the chauffeur fails to perform any of the mentioned duties the employer shall be at liberty to terminate this agreement without notice."

Members are to be requested to only employ chauffeurs having an A.A. certificate.

It should be an interesting meeting.

HOW "LIZA" LOST.

BEATEN BUT NOT DISGRACED.

A much discussed bowls match was played off yesterday evening at the Police Recreation Club between "Liza" Cooper and W. Gerrard. The former was the challenger and it certainly appeared as though he had bitten off somewhat more than he was able to masticate, for the game finished against him to the tune of 4-21.

The score, however, is not a true reflex of the play, for Cooper played a really good game, and had the worst of the "jaws"; but the generalship of the popular and imperious Inspector stood him in good stead right through, and he had the match in
